NEW ZEALAND.

The Maori War Again—Persecutions of the Colonists.

[From the London Standard, Jan. 4.]

We can hardly reflect without a shudder upon the perils to which hundreds of our defenceless countrymen. English men, women and children, are now exposed in New Zealand—perils which the imaglanton of those who are home stayers is scarcely able to grasp. This is the worst calamity which we have to fear, in anticipation of the next mail from New Zealand. Disasters in the field, or rather in the forest, are but of comparatively small account in a distant country, where loss of this kind of prestige does not lead directly to lose of power. The Maories are acute enough to know both their strength and their weakness. They have never been able to cope with the regular soldlers of England on anything like fair terms, and they are not likely to challenge any more conclusions in the open field. Their rare instinctive capacity for war has taught them, long before this, had they have no hope of prevailing against the superior discipline and organization of European solders. They have become aware that their only chance of success is in a desultory system of bush ghiting, and they seem to have added, either in their despair or in a new access of savage animosity, a kind of factics which, however it may affect the ultimate issue of the event, they know will be most mischlevous to their enemy.

a kind of factice which, however it may alrect the utilimate issue of the event, they know will be most bischlevous to their enemy.

A systematic massacre of the white settlers is a form of warfare which we shall flud it difficult to encounter or to provide against. Owing to the nature of the country and the scattered character of the English settlements, which are naturally dispersed along all the most open and defenceless districts of the Island, the Maories, who inhabit the wooden and mountainous interior, will be able to make great havoc among the colonists. Our only places of strength are on the sea coast—too far away to afford any real protection to the districts of which they are the nominal capitals. In the art of occupying and fortafying detached posts in the interior we seem to be infortor to the Maories, nor have we force sufficient to keep ps such garrisons in our inhand reducts as might be effective for purposes of defence. The war upon which the colony has entered is, in fact, precisely one in which the Maories risk nothing and have bvery advantage, and in which the English settlers ink all and which they have to wage under the most infavorable conditions.

which the colony has entered is, in fact, precisely one in which the Maories risk nothing and have every advantage, and in which the Emplish settlers risk all and which they have to wage under the most unfavorable conditions.

If left to be conducted by the colonists alone we must be prepared to hear of many pieces of news from New Zealand unfattering to our national pride and shocking to our feelings of humanity. We need hardly say why it is that the colony of New Zealand is unable of its own resources to carry on a war with the Maories in an effective manner. Colonists, as a rule, are neither warlike nor military. The settlers are men who have come to the country with a view of pushing their fortunes, some by trade, others by agriculture and by sheep larming. They have neither taste nor aptitude for the business of lighting, and they have naturally a great rejuctance to abandon their ordinary pursuits in order to wage, at their own expense, what must be an unprofitable and may be an implementally arrangement to the hardy ploneers of the Western States of America, able to match the Maories in their own gifts and to fight them in their own way. The government itself has no money to spend upon a regunar army, and such recruits as it is able to get for the militia are mostly the scum and refuse of the towns and of the older Australian settlements. It is not surprising, therefore, that the insignificant colonial forces have proved themselves incapable even of holding their own against the Maori insergents. There has been, doubtless, a good deal of exceptionable feelbeness and mismanagement displayed by the Central government at Wellington, in their conduct of this Maori campaign, but there is more excuse than we, in our impatience of military disasters, seem inclined to allow for the lil-success of the colonial arms.

The question is, whether the mother country is prepared to abandon the colonists of new Zealand enterity to their own resources, and whether, if she does so, she has elected, what is a fair corollary

ROAKING THE POOR NEGROES.

Some wag started a report among the negroes in the rear of the city which created quite a sensation resterday. His story was that a wealthy colored woman had died and left five dollars apiece to every colored person in the city, application to be made of the same at the Presbyterian church on Gasquet ttreet. The story apread like wildfire, and yesterlay, for several hours, hundreds of negro men and women of all ages—the former with their favorite subs and the latter with their lunch baskets—took up a position on Gasquet street, around the church, it was late in the day before this queer-looking assemblage dispersed.

It was late in the day before this queer-looking assemblage dispersed.

GRATITUDE OF A NEGRO "BOY."

A spruce-looking, coarsely but well dressed colored boy from the country, apparently between twenty-five and thirty years of age, was engaged yesterday in looking up his former mistress, a Mirs. Marshall, who, he learned, was in need of help. The boy stated to us that he had been working hard and had made money since the war, and that he was now determined to assist his former mistress if he could find her. "She always took good care of me." he said, "and she shall never want if I can help it." CHRISTMAS PRESENTS TO NEGROES AT UNCLE SAM'S EXPENSE.

The Carrell Record, published at Providence, has the following in its issue of January 2. We are informed by good authority that a large lot of government clotting sent to the Eureau arent at this place, to be given out to the poor and indigent, was turned over to Benham & Co., and by them appropriated and disposed of as Christmas presents to the darkies in that neighborhood. This is a matter that should receive attention and investigation. There are many poor colored people in this neighborhood, who me suffering for necessary raimont, who have been outrageously neglected by the Bureau, when it was the duty of that institution to provide for the colored pappers.

was the duty of that institution to provide the colored paupers.

LOOKING AFTER THE BEST ROUSES.

A St. Jean Baptist paper has the following:—
Colored folks are daily seen travelling along the road looking for the "boss" who pives higher wages, or who gives his laborers a better chance in the way of raising corn, hogs, chickens, &c. Contracts are being made at wages ranging from ten to fifteen dollars a month. Several planters have already commenced working; but low, if any, have yet the number of hands required.
